

Not speaking to a recruiter is like climbing without rope. You may well get up but why take the risk?

And like climbing rope we should be there for all of your ascent. We'll be there to advise when you're not wanting to move but want to understand what your maternity rights might be. Or what salary you should be earning, or whether working overseas once you qualify is feasible. We'll tell you if it's normal to work as long hours as you do, or what pension you should be getting, what bonus, and that just because the firm you're with are like this not all firms are. We can be your support, your safety net. Don't only call us when you're moving, call us when you're not. If you know us and we know you, then the support we will give you will be more timely to encourage you to leap when you need to and to hang tight when you don't. We're a consultancy, let us consult. We're actually pretty good at it.
